David Davis Challenges All Republican First District Congressional Candidates

Apr 6, 2006 --

State Representative David Davis, candidate for the Republican nomination for the Congressional District House seat, today challenged all Republican candidates to a : debates.

Representative Davis stated: "It is time for all of the Republican candidates for the Congressional District House seat to step out and debate the issues. I challenge a opponents to meet with me for a series of open and honest debates." He continu would like for this debate to take place in each county across the District."

"The history of our election process in the First District shows us that debates hav vital part of educating the voters to the issues and the stand of the candidates on t issues. These debates that I am proposing will help the voters to get to really know candidates. I hope that each of the candidates will accept my challenge and work with me on a campaign to make these debates a reality”, Davis concluded.

David Davis is the consensus conservative candidate for Tennessee's First District Congressional seat being vacated by the retirement of Congressman Bill Jenkins. Davis represented the 6th District for eight years and sits on the House Transportation and Government Operations Committee, and the Public Safety and Rural Roads Subcommittee. He also serves as Chairman of the House Commerce, Labor, and Transportation Subcommittee. Davis has been a leader in the effort to bring open government to the Tennessee State House.
